

ABSTRACT

[0001] A system and/or method that provides a virtual alpha-numeric keyboard based at least in part upon a user real-time input entry within a portable computing device. An input component receives an input providing a recognition component to determine and/or infer possible input entries (e.g., virtual keys). Once possible input entries are determined and/or inferred, a rendering component concurrently displays the virtual keys during the input entry.